

Program for Scholarly Integrity: Ethical Dilemmas at the Beginnings of Research

Rosemarie Garland-Thomson
Women's Studies and English
Emory University

Emory is an “ethically engaged, and diverse community, whose members work collaboratively for positive transformation in the world”

University Vision Statement

Emory is “distinctive for its ethical commitment in fostering openness and diversity of thought, experience, and culture.”

University Vision Statement

Emory “welcomes a diversity of ethnic, cultural, socioeconomic, religious, national, and international backgrounds [and abilities] believing that the intellectual and social energy that results from such diversity is a primary asset of the University.”

University Mission Statement

“...we recognize that innovative research and scholarship must include diversity in thought, experience and culture. We foster an environment of inclusion that ensures the range of educational benefits that can only come from diversity across the academic community. Our graduate faculty is a diverse group of distinguished researchers and teachers.”

Laney Graduate School Vision Statement

Emory promotes:

ethical engagement

commitments to social justice and equity

diversity