

The Emory Clinic offers services such as physical therapy, and other basic services. Photo by Edward Chang.

Health Services

Dedicated health care professionals strive to meet the primary health care needs of Emory students. Some of the services that Emory University Health Service provide include health education, nutrition counseling, and physical examinations. The EUHS also provides unique services, such as their anonymous testing program. They can test for HIV antibodies and Hepatitis B. Students are seen by a counselor that is certified for HIV and post-test counseling. One student commented on EUHS by saying, "I think it's great that they have such wonderful services on campus because it encourages people to maintain their health." By Jean Popowski.

The Emory University Hospital cares for not only the students, but also local area residents. Photo by Edward Chang.

1999 Yearbook

