

My favorite TV show is Gossip Girl. The main purpose of Gossip Girl is to entertain its audience of essentially teenage girls. Gossip Girl uncovers relatable drama, situations and depicts the social elites of New York City. Throughout the show the audience follows protagonists, Serena and Blair, as they complete high school and embark on their journey in separate colleges. While in High School they face their fair share of arguments ranging from things such as boys all the way to admission to a college of their choice. In addition to their typical teenage lives, a popular blogger on the Upper East Side writes about these two girls and all of their experiences. Gossip Girl demonstrates the meaning of friendship, illustrates the obstacles teenagers may face and promotes the Upper East Side of New York City as a wealthy, elite area. This tv script of realistic fiction makes the Upper East Side an extremely attractive place to visit and of course, live.
